Wastewater board eyes dividing disputed contract

BY DENA BISNETTE
The Waveland Regional Wastewater Management District Board has apparently found a compromise that will end a three-month stalemate in contract negotiations. The proposed compromise involves splitting the disputed contract into two sections and is expected to help the district meet an Aug. 1 funding deadline.

The compromise calls for splitting the contract for engineering and administration services on Segment III of the district's current project into two parts.

Segment III consists of improvements to the existing Waveland wastewater treatment plant in preparation for the even-tuall linkage of the Waveland and Bay St. Louis sewerage systems.

The board has discussed other solutions during the three-month debate with Reynolds, Smith and Hills of Jacksonville, Fla.

Reynolds, Smith and Hills had submitted a revised cost estimate after Segments III and IV of the project were reorganized in Segments III, IV and V, but board members John Longo Jr., Victor Franckiewicz Jr. and A.A. Kellar have argued that the revised costs are too high.

The board had discussed readvertising the Segment III services in order to obtain less expensive proposals, and could have legally done so, because the contract with Reynolds, Smith and Hills was not finalized.

However, Board Attorney Lucien Gex had cautioned that "changing engineering firms in midstream could leave questions about who is to blame if something goes wrong."

In addition, readvertising and evaluating proposals would be difficult or impossible if the district is to make an Aug. 1 U.S. Environmental Protection Agency deadline for funding, Administrator Ethel Schott said.

Under the proposed compromise, the engineering services for Segment III would continue to be supplied by Reynolds, Smith and Hills. Administrative matters would be turned over to Consultant Ray Eaton of Jackson.

Eaton was formerly a member of Lewis-Eaton Partnership, now Ed Lewis Partnership of Jackson, and Reynolds, Smith and Hills is an associate of the Lewis firm.

The liability problems with hiring a new firm are not expected if Eaton agrees to take over the administrative work, Gex said, because Eaton had originally worked on Segment III and Segment IV before leaving Lewis-Eaton Partnership, Gex said.

In addition, Eaton's involvement should help provide some continuity between phases of the project, Schott said.

The board voted unanimously Wednesday to authorize Gex and Schott to review the contract and determine which of the items it contains should be assigned to Reynolds, Smith and Hills and which should be assigned to Eaton.

County students turned away from Bay High

BY DENA BISNETTE
Students from Hancock North Central and Pass Christian attempting to register for summer classes at Bay St. Louis High School Friday found no seats available.

The Hancock and Pass Christian students were turned away at registration Friday because the two classes being offered were filled to capacity, Superintendent J.D. McCullough said.

He said school districts, under the guidelines of the State Department of Education, may not enroll more than 30 students in each high school level class.

To enroll more than 30 students, the district would have to divide the classes into sections of not more than 30 students each, with one teacher for each section.

Bay High students were given preference in the two classes, ninth and tenth grade English, because the state gives the district the option to provide services to students from outside districts if the needs of its own students have been met.

McCullough added that providing summer classes is also an option. This year, Bay St. Louis is providing the classes but the Hancock and Pass Christian districts are not.

He said obtaining teachers for summer classes can be difficult because they are not required to work during the summer term except voluntarily.

If additional teachers certified to teach English can be hired, Bay High may provide some type of late registration this week, the superintendent added.

Some additional students may also be accepted if drop-outs leave seats open, he added.

The closed classes, however, have caused complaints from some of the parents of students who were turned away.

Mrs. Kenneth May of Lakeshore, whose son and four Hancock North Central classmates could not get into the 10th grade class, spoke for some of the parents Friday afternoon.

"I'm not upset about my son having to repeat a grade. That's his fault because he failed. What I'm upset about is that we had no warning that these classes would not be available to our children," she said.

Unit system begins in Hancock County

BY DENA BISNETTE
The Hancock County Board of Supervisors has unanimously adopted a resolution placing the county under the unit system of government.

The resolution was approved Thursday in accordance with the results of a June 3 referendum, in which the county's voters chose the unit system over the current beat system.

The unit system is designed to pool road and bridge money and county equipment and distribute both on a priority basis. The beat system divides road and bridge funds into five parts, one for each supervisor's district, and each district has its own road and bridge equipment.

The resolution fulfills a requirement for implementation of the unit system within 90 days. That requirement was included in the local and private bill that authorized the referendum.

The board has made no official move toward hiring an administrator, but Board President A.A. Kellar has requested that some board work sessions be called in order to provide the supervisors with time to discuss the administrator and implementation of the system.

Work sessions are primarily directed toward discussion and are not considered official meetings. The board members can not vote during a work session.

In other business, the board:

—Approved a proposal by Hancock County Sheriff Ronald Peterson to hire Bay St. Louis Animal Warden Larry Dahl to substitute on a part-time basis for County Animal Warden Lisle Dedeaux, who is hospitalized.

—Approved setting up a meeting between Peterson, board members and Board Attorney Walker James

She said the Hancock North Central students had been referred to Bay High for the classes by guidance counselors.

"What we want to know is why didn't the two school districts communicate. Why didn't the Hancock and Pass Christian counselors call Bay and say we have these many students who want to register for summer school?"

"We want to know why the Bay district only hired two teachers," Mrs. May said.

In addition, the parents of the five students said that their children had been taking them about persistent rumors regarding cancellation of summer school.

"Many of them went over to Gulfport on up to Picayune to make other arrangements. The ones who took their counselors' word can't. Some of the classes we're checked on in other districts have been going on for two weeks now."

Mrs. May said the parents planned to contact both McCullough and Hancock County Superintendent of Education Terrell Randolph to see if some type of arrangements can be made for additional classes.

Toddler burned in Waveland fire

BY DENA BISNETTE
An 18-month-old Waveland boy is being treated for second degree burns in the pediatric unit of Oschner's Hospital in New Orleans, La., following a Thursday fire that gutted his bedroom and a living room in his wood-frame home.

Three other members of the family escaped without serious injuries. According to Waveland Fire Chief David Garcia, the injured child is Shanan Krupps, son of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Krupps III of 178 Oak Boulevard.

Garcia said the cause of the fire had not been determined Friday.

The Waveland Fire Department arrived at the scene only three minutes after a 9:54 a.m. call, Garcia said, and took less than 10 minutes to extinguish the blaze.

The family apparently escaped being trapped in the building, which did not have a smoke alarm, because Mrs. Krupps, who was napping on a living room sofa, heard her son crying.

A second child, three-year-old Jay Krupps, was in the same room with Shana Krupps and Phillip Krupps III was in a back bedroom of the house.

The fire apparently started in the bedroom occupied by the children, Garcia said.

"If the mother hadn't heard her baby crying, it might have been too late for them to get out. Two rooms were destroyed and there was heavy smoke all over the place," Garcia said.

Q: While reviewing my bank statement I found an error for a transaction I made on an ATM. When I complained about it to the bank officer, I was told that nothing could be done about it because it happened three months ago. Can't I get my money back?

A: You cannot get your money back if the date of the statement on which the error first appeared was over two months ago. It doesn't depend on the transaction date. By law, banks must give you 60 days from the date a problem or error appears on your periodic statement to notify them.

The bank then has 10 business days to investigate and tell you the result. If the bank needs more time, it can take another 45 days, but it must deposit the disputed amount in-

Quotables by CUEVAS

We have been attending the 120th Annual Convention of the Mississippi Press Association at the Biloxi Hilton for the last three days.

This gave us an opportunity to speak with publisher friends with whom we have become acquainted over the years from throughout the state.

The Mississippi Press Association is one of the older associations in the state.

Most publishers from the interior of the state envy those of us who are on the Coast all of the time. Well, most of the time, because they all say they would be nowhere around for a hurricane.

I guess every area has some drawbacks.

Special programs are presented at the Bay St. Louis Rotary Club's weekly luncheons.

On Wednesday, one of the best presentations we can remember in a very long time was given by Arthur Morrison, Mississippi Power supervisor of claims.

Morrison's presentation was on electrical safety, and it is a message his company is bringing to any group that will listen.

It is a program every individual should go out of their way to hear.

The demonstration involves a neighborhood with electric lines and shows how accidents can happen which can cause death or serious injuries.

As I have mentioned in the beginning, it is a program everyone should see, and any organization interested can contact Mississippi Power Company.

Dead fish on Bay bridge leaves poor impression on visitors

ATT: Letters to the Editor

RE: The "Sport" fishermen mess thrown all over the Hwy. 90 bridge. If you do not want to keep that fish-throw it back in the Bay, but not on the bridge.

Besides being an unsightly and smelly mess, it's dangerous. I have seen drivers veer to avoid hitting a wildly flapping fish tossed onto the roadway. And stiff catfish spines have deflated many a tire.

Can you imagine what visitors to Mississippi must think? Our recent Minnesota friends were appalled to see the mess of dead and dying fish on the bridge. Their memory of our beautiful bay will not be a pleasant one.

If you can carry your rods, a bag for your catch, a cooler for your beer...you can carry a garbage bag, too.

Let's use some common sense before the bridge is closed to all fishing. Throw that fish back in the Bay! Some kid may even get the thrill of catching it all over again.

Neighborhood watch programs recommended as deterrent to crime

June 3, 1986
Editor
The Sea Coast Echo

Dear Sir,
The new Neighborhood Watch unit for the West Cedar Point area has been established through the efforts of many who contributed to this much-needed deterrent to crime.

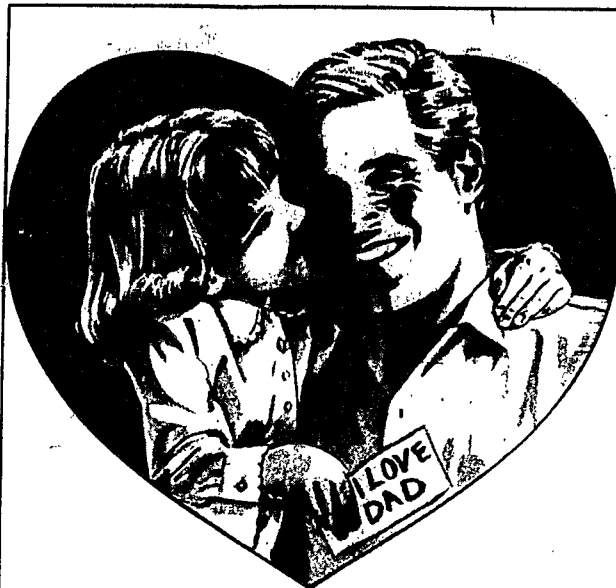

With the help of Capt. Jim Clark and Sgt. Rita Blaize of the Bay St. Louis Police Department and Supervisor Roger Dale Ladner of Hancock County, most of the 53 households in the area were advised of precautionary measures against burglary and warning signs were posted throughout the neighborhood.

Nationwide statistics have shown that alerting citizens to the need of reporting suspected burglaries, not only to their own property but the property of their neighbors, has substantially reduced the crime rate.

Capt. Clark and Sgt. Blaize can be contacted at 467-9221 if other neighborhoods are interested.

Matters of Health

By Jennifer Steel, RN
West Jefferson

Understanding the medicines you take can have a positive effect on your health.

Clearly, if you are taking medications, you have a need to know about them. But, what should you know? There are questions to which you will want answers. Your doctor, pharmacist, or nurse can help provide you with the information needed.

Questions you may ask about medicine prescribed for you include:

—What am I taking and what is this drug supposed to do?

—How and when should I take this drug?

—What exact amount of the drug should I take?

—For what period of time should I take this drug?

—What food, drinks, other medications, and what activities should I avoid while taking this drug?

—Should I expect any side effects and what do I do if they occur?

—Is there any information I should have about the drug?

Equally important, clarify any answers you don't understand.

For a good place on which to write answers to the above questions you may write for a complimentary wallet card from "Get the Answers", NCPIE Campaign, P. O. Box 1080, Purcellville, VA 22132-1080.

If you would like a Drug Allergy Alert Wallet Card with corresponding space to list the medicines you currently are taking, call or write me: Jennifer Steel, RN, Patient and Community Education, West Jefferson General Hospital, 1101 Avenue "D", Marrero, Louisiana 70072, (504) 347-5511, ext. 1609.

The People's Business

A Weekly Editorial
From Mississippi Economic Council

AN ALTERNATIVE TO POOR ROADS AND HIGHER TAXES

A supervisor in a certain Mississippi county was "viewing with alarm" a few days ago the fact that counties will be losing federal funds.

It was his concerns about county roads that attracted attention. Fears are, he said, the state will lose about $30 million annually from federal sources which have been used for county roads.

This means, he concluded, that Mississippians will have to either pay more taxes to support better roads, or accept poor roads.

There is another solution. It's called "county unit."

In fact, a recent study by the Mississippi Economic Council indicated that, conservatively, Mississippi counties could save about $30 million per year if all 82 counties adopted the unit system of road management.

That would mean eliminating the present extravagance of five road systems per county and replacing those five systems, which exist in most counties, with a single, countywide road maintenance and construction program.

It would mean countywide budgeting, planning, administration, purchasing, employment, and similar practices.

There is an alternative to poor roads and higher taxes.

That alternative is better management.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: As a result of a June 3 election on the county unit issue, Hancock County must implement a single program of county road maintenance and construction by Sept. 1)

Constitution Commission debates form of Legislature

By Constitutional Study
Commission Staff

Governor Allain's Constitutional Study Commission has begun review of the structure and function of the Legislative Branch of state government.

A hot issue before the 350-member panel is the debate between a legislature composed of two houses, the popular bicameral system, and one comprised of a single house, the unicameral legislature.

In a preliminary vote, the commission recommended, by a narrow margin, that Mississippi continue to operate under its bicameral legislature.

Advocates of bicameralism contend that two houses are an American tradition, dating back to the founding of our nation. Bicameralists assert that two houses are not as easily overcome under the pressure of huge, powerful lobbies.

Bicameralists argue that the two house form prevents hasty and careless legislation. In a 90 or 120

BOYS, GIRLS STATE PROGRAMS OFFER ENCOURAGEMENT

I have recently had the opportunity to speak to delegates to both Boys and Girls State, held in Jackson. This program offers high school students the opportunity to learn about their government.

Each year I try to participate with these groups, so I can get some insight into what they are thinking. I find that these young people have a great hope for the future of Mississippi. They want to know why certain things happen in government.

For instance, during the special legislative session, like so many Mississippians, they wanted to know why the Senate majority and Lieutenant Governor would not agree to distribute $12 million to financially strapped state agencies.

They ask questions about the economic development of our state. When we explain to them that our focus in economic development has been on home-grown industry and that 50,000 new jobs have been created in the past 2½ years, they see that the entire employment future of Mississippi does not solely rest with Toyota or General Motors.

They endorse paying teachers more, if they are measured by some means of competency or merit. Our legislators have recognized this as a need and are working on improving teacher pay and linking the additional pay to some type of merit program.

They want to know about the future of universities in this state. Many want to attend college here. We encourage them to do so, noting that efforts are underway with the State College Board, university presidents, legislature and Governor's office to improve our system of higher education.

We must determine the role for each of our universities in serving their students and their communities.

A lot of people in our state care a great deal about making a more efficient, more productive higher education system part of our future. These young people are excited about our state; they have a lot of dreams that can be realized. With their enthusiasm and mindpower for the future and our hard work laying the groundwork today, we can help create a brighter Mississippi.

NUCLEAR WASTE DECISION GOOD NEWS FOR STATE

Officials of the Department of Energy have notified our office that they have recommended sites in the states of Texas, Nevada and Washington for further study as possible locations for the nation's first high-level nuclear waste repository. President Reagan has accepted this recommendation.

For Mississippi, this means that — although we were on the list of the five final sites — we will not be recommended for further study at this time.

This decision, if it remains constant, is a victory for many thousands of Mississippians who have opposed the dumping of high-level nuclear waste in our state. The people of Richton and Perry County should be commended for their untiring efforts against the consideration of their community for this dump site.

I highly commend them, all state officials, our Congressional delegation and residents of South Mississippi and the Gulf Coast who never gave up the fight in this many-year battle.

While we can relax a little, we cannot totally discontinue our efforts. The states that were selected for further study are already vowing to fight this action. Some are considering taking the issue to court. Others have major political contests underway in which this decision could become a focal issue.

We in Mississippi must continue to voice total opposition to use of the state as a nuclear waste site. If we remain watchful, then any change in attitude, by the Department of Energy will be immediately noticed and dealt with.

On behalf of the people of Mississippi, I thank everyone who has fought so hard these past few years to keep our state a pleasant place to live.

After the hurricane has passed

If you evacuate to a public shelter, remain there until you are told that it is safe to return home.

Listen to your local radio or television stations for advice and instructions from the local government about food, housing and other forms of assistance.

Do not drive unless necessary. The streets are likely to be filled with debris and downed power lines. Roads should be reserved primarily for emergency vehicles and essential rescue and recovery work.

Avoid loose or dangling wires and report them to your local electric company as soon as possible. Report any broken sewer or water mains to the water department.

Hurricanes moving inland can cause severe flooding. Stay away from river banks and streams.

If the power has been off, check refrigerated food for spoilage. A freezer should keep food in good condition, provided it is kept closed.

Discuss hurricane preparedness with your family. Share your ideas with friends, neighbors and relatives. Hurricane preparedness is a job for everyone in the community.

For any help or assistance on hurricane preparedness, contact your local Civil Defense agency.

the unicameral form, the state would have saved an estimated $2 million last year alone.

Unicameralists cite one final reason for opposing two houses: the powerful Conference Committee. Conference committees, committees chosen to discuss bills which the two houses cannot agree on, have as their members appointees of the Speaker of the House and the Lieutenant Governor.

These individuals have sometimes opposed the substance of certain legislation and use conference committees as a means to kill legislation, despite only minor differences. In a one house system, this committee is unnecessary.

The Constitutional Study Commission meets again in Jackson on June 25 to address this debate as well as the structure of Judicial and Executive Branches of state government.

Federal safety agency lists fireworks restrictions, precautions

It has been recognized for some years that fireworks, for all their patriotic associations, present a very serious safety hazard, particularly for children.

Deaths, blindings, amputations and severe burns have been all too often the result of the use of fireworks.

—A 14-year-old boy was seriously injured while mixing chemicals for making explosives in his family's home. The chemicals which were ordered from a mail-order firm exploded unexpectedly, destroying much of the home.

—Two men were injured, one of them critically, when their pick-up truck exploded after several M-1000 firecrackers were accidentally ignited. The illegal firecrackers had been purchased from a roadside stand.

—An eight-year-old girl received second and third degree burns to her leg when a spark from a sparkler she was holding ignited her dress.

Accidents like these prompted the Federal government to act. Under the Federal Hazardous Substances Act, the government prohibited the sale to consumers of the most dangerous types of fireworks.

These included cherry bombs, aerial bombs, M-80 salutes and larger firecrackers containing more than two grains of powder. Also banned were mail-order kits designed to build these fireworks.

In a more stringent regulation that went into effect Dec. 6, 1976, the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission lowered the permissible charge in firecrackers to no more than 50 milligrams of powder.

In addition, the regulation provides performance specifications for fireworks intended for consumer use, including a requirement that fuses burn at least three seconds but no longer than six seconds.

All fireworks must carry a warning label describing necessary safety precautions.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission estimates that in 1985, 10,300 people were treated in hospital emergency rooms for injuries associated with fireworks. Over half the injuries were burns, and many of the injuries involved the head and face, including the mouth, ears, and eyes.

Forty-two percent of the victims were under 15 years of age. Since January 1985, there have been 27 deaths reported to CPSC from fireworks, 23 of which resulted from factory explosions.

Fireworks should be used only with extreme caution. Older children should be closely supervised and younger children should not be allowed to play with fireworks.

Before using fireworks, make sure they are permitted in your state or local area. Many states and local governments prohibit or limit Class C fireworks, which are the common fireworks and firecrackers sold for consumer use. Class C fireworks include the following:

—Fountains, California candles, spike and handle cylindrical fountains, Roman candles, rockets with sticks, wheels, snakes, illuminating torches, sparklers, mines and shells, whistles without report, toy smoke devices and flitter devices, helicopter-type rockets, party poppers, missile-type rockets, and fireworks with no more than 50 mg. powder.

The following is a summary of state regulations (as of April, 1985):

I. States which allow Class C (ordinary) fireworks include Alabama, Alaska, Arkansas, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, South Dakota, Tennessee and Wisconsin.

II. States which allow Class C fireworks as approved by enforcing authority, or as specified in law (total of 17 states plus the District of Columbia) include California, District of Columbia, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Washington and Wyoming.

III. States having no fireworks laws, except at county level are Hawaii and Nevada.

IV. States which allow only sparklers and/or snakes are Colorado (sparklers), Illinois (sparklers), Maine (sparklers), Maryland (sparklers), Pennsylvania (sparklers), Iowa (sparklers & snakes), and Oregon (sparklers & snakes).

V. States which ban all Class C fireworks are Arizona, Connecticut, Delaware, Georgia, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Rhode Island, Vermont, and West Virginia.

To help use fireworks more safely, the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission offers the following recommendations:

—Do not allow younger children to play with fireworks under any circumstances. Remember that fireworks are not toys for children. The sparkler, considered by many the ideal "safe" firework for the young, burns at very high temperatures and can easily ignite clothing. Children cannot appreciate the danger involved and cannot act correctly in case of an emergency.

—If you permit older children to use fireworks, be sure they use them only under close adult supervision. Do not allow any running or horse play while they are being used.

—Before using any fireworks, read and follow all warning instructions printed on the label.

—Light fireworks outdoors in a clear area away from houses and flammable materials (gasoline cans, etc.)

—Keep a bucket of water nearby for emergencies and for dousing fireworks that don't go off.

—Do not try to relight or handle malfunctioning fireworks. Soak them with water and throw away.

—Be sure other people are out of range before lighting fireworks.

—Never ignite fireworks in a container, especially a glass or metal container.

—Store fireworks in a dry, cool place. Check instructions for special storage directions.

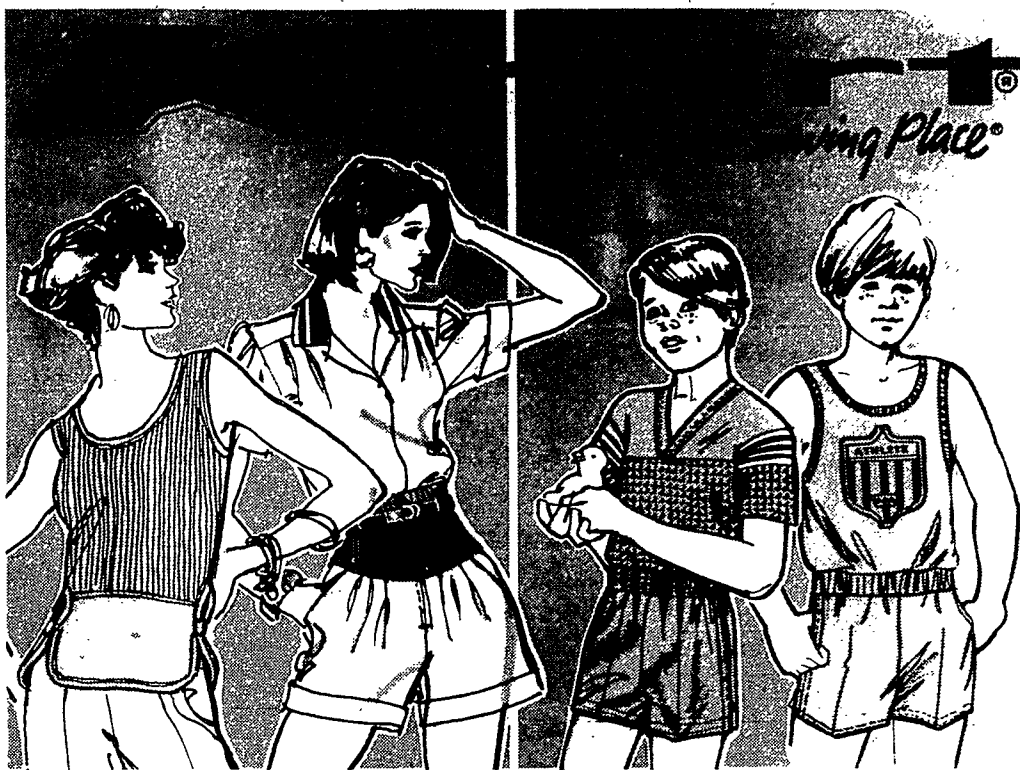

—Parents should supervise the ordering and use of mail-order "make your own" fireworks kits. Some kit contents can produce dangerous, explosive devices.

Consumer Update on health insurance

By Janet K. Lukens
Coast Consumer
Management Center

Today's consumer is faced with a health care system that is changing rapidly. Due to rising costs, consumers may want to look closely at the following checklist when selecting health and disability insurance.

* If you pay your premiums directly, try to arrange to pay annually or quarterly rather than monthly, as it is usually cheaper.

* Policies should be delivered to you within 30 days. If not, contact your insurer. If 60 days go by, contact the state department of insurance.

* You have the advantage of the "free look" provision which allows 10 days for you to decide if the policy is for you. If not, you can get a refund.

* Read the contract every year to see if the benefits are in line with current medical costs.

* Beware of policy switching, for your old policy may just need to be amended. Switching may subject you to new waiting periods and new clusions.

* Duplicate coverage is expensive and since most group policies now contain a "Coordination of Benefits" clause which limits benefits to 100 percent of your covered charges, you won't make a profit by overlapping coverages.

* Do read disease policies such as cancer insurance, which has restrictions and limitations. Such a policy does not replace a comprehensive major medical insurance policy.

* Be honest on your application regarding pre-existing conditions. If you fail to mention it you may not get paid when you need it. A time lapse is required, usually one to two years for payment on pre-existing conditions.

For more information on or help with your family's insurance needs, contact the Coast Consumer Management Center at 388-4710. All educational literature and consultations are free. Or call your local county Extension office.

IN AND OUT—From left, a trackhoe operator removes buried marsh grass at a private dumping site in Clermont Harbor while Beat One Supervisor Bert Courge and Beat Four Supervisor Sam Perniciaro discuss U.S. Environmental Protection Agency regulations. County crews put the marshgrass, collected off the beachfront after Hurricane Juan, on the site last year. The supervisors were later informed by EPA officials that part of the dumpsite is classified as wetlands and were told to move the grass. Perniciaro said all five supervisors have contributed crews or equipment to the project and the work will be finished next week if weather conditions remain favorable. (Staff photo by Dena Bisnette)

BLOCKED—Some of the wrecked boats in a private canal at Lakeshore show above the waterline at high tide. According to Beat One supervisor Bert Courge, a group of fishermen who are unable to navigate large boats past the sunken vessels or have damaged boats in unsuccessful attempts to pass have appealed to the county for help. The board of supervisors is presently trying to determine the ownership of the boats and whether or not the county has the authority to order them removed or move them. (Staff photo by Dena Bisnette)

Everyday practices contaminate water supply

(Editor's Note: The primary source of drinking water in Mississippi is being wasted and sometimes contaminated. In the third of a four-part series on 500-year problems, Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service Land Use Coordinator Bob Chapin explains the issue of groundwater contamination and corrective steps that may be taken.)

By Karen L. Moore
Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service
Groundwater, or well water, is the primary source of drinking water in Mississippi, much of the South and in half the U.S. Yet everyday precious groundwater is wasted and contaminated.

It can take centuries to restore contaminated groundwater to its original purity, said Dr. Bob Chapin, coordinator of the Land Use Center of the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

The issue of groundwater contamination is one of several that must be dealt with in the next 500 years, Chapin said. Other long-range problems are climatic changes, human population growth causing extinction of other species and soil erosion.

"The purpose of 500-year planning is not to decide what to plan for 500 years in the future, but to identify problems that must be corrected during that time period," Chapin said.

A 500-year problem is one that is statistically likely to happen sometime in the next 500 years. There are recent examples of the importance of planning to avoid future problems.

Severe flooding on the Mississippi River, with levees designed for floods to occur only once in 250 years, approached the 100-year high in 1975 at Vicksburg.

The issue of 500-year problems is underscored by the Chernobyl nuclear accident in the Soviet Union. After widespread contamination, the Soviets are encasing the nuclear plant in concrete to prevent further contamination to the environment.

Chapin said groundwater becomes contaminated by hazardous waste. The waste gets into the groundwater through recharge areas such as streams, swamps and sandy areas.

A large amount of hazardous waste, including nuclear waste, comes from U.S. industry. Chapin said 35 to 60 million tons were being produced at the beginning of the 1980s. The amount will increase about 6 percent each year.

Safely disposing hazardous waste to protect groundwater is an issue of growing concern. Safe limestone where waste can remain for centuries without contaminating the water supply.

But many people are still skeptical and don't want any kind of disposal facility close to them. Chapin suggested encouraging each county to provide its own facility instead of hauling hazardous waste to other parts of the country.

"Another solution to preventing contamination of groundwater is to rely more on surface water from lakes and streams," Chapin said.

"Also people could recycle water and conserve water by reducing consumption through smaller openings in plumbing fixtures and fixing faulty plumbing. Many industries are recycling water used for cooling."

Agriculture contributes to groundwater contamination when chemicals get into recharge areas. Soil testing, conservation tillage and grass filter strips can do much to prevent this.

Look for costly defects

Before buying, inspect the older house

MISSISSIPPI STATE - Buying an older house can be tricky. A fresh paint job, beautiful wallpaper, the cozy atmosphere from a wood stove—each of these may be so appealing that the prospective buyer forgets to inspect the structural elements.

Spotting defects before bidding can save money, said Dr. Frances Graham, a housing specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service. It may even prevent buying the wrong house.

She said defects come in two sizes. Big ones such as leaky roofs can be difficult or costly to correct.

Small defects are usually a matter of personal taste and may even fall into the category of do-it-yourself repairs. Keeping these differences in mind when buying an older house will help prospective buyers make the right choices.

An inspection of the house is a good idea.

"Inspecting a house for structural and mechanical defects can be a joint effort between the buyer and the housing inspector or architect," Ms. Graham said. "A professional may charge $75 to $150 for detailed analysis. It's worth it because it gives the buyer a solid basis for negotiation and planning."

Make a complete analysis of the home. Don't confuse this analysis with an appraisal which is an estimate of what the house is worth. An analysis will tell you the house's condition.

Ms. Graham advised potential buyers to carefully inspect 10 major points of a house before putting down any money:

Location: Is it close to schools, public transportation and shopping? Is the house protected against the impact of heavy traffic and flooding? What about zoning and property taxes for the area?

Lot: Are there any steep slopes on the walks and driveways? Does moisture drain away from the house? Is there drainage from neighboring lots? Is space and privacy adequate?

Roof: Is the roof well vented? Is the ridge of the roof straight and free from bowing? Is the flashing in good condition and free from rust? Are roof shingles in place and free from warping and curling? If the roof is flat, are there bare spots, bubbles or peeling?

Siding: Is the siding at least six inches above ground? Is there any rotting, warping, cracking, blistering or peeling? If the exterior is stucco or brick, does it have any cracks? Are the walls straight? Do they contain major bulges?

Windows and Doors: Are they in good condition, free of moisture damage, pitting or rust? Are they double paned or are storm windows and doors provided? Are exterior doors at least three feet wide?

Interior: Do the walls and ceilings show any signs of moisture damage, streaks, stains or peeling paint? Are there indications of structural damage? Are the floors in good condition? (Look for worn spots on hard surface floors and/or carpeting.)

Are there enough electrical outlets in each room and are light switches conveniently located? Does location of the heating elements, doors and windows allow enough space to arrange furniture?

Electrical: Does the house have 100 ampere service, a minimum of eight separate circuits and 240-volt electric service?

Plumbing: Does the house have a main shut-off valve plus others for hot and cold to all outlets? Are the water lines made of copper? (Check by using a magnet.) Is water pressure adequate? Does the water heater have a pressure release valve? Is the water heater free from rust or leaks?

If the house has a private well, has the water been tested lately? If there's a separate sewage system, has it been properly installed and maintained?

Heating: Has the furnace rusted? Are there other signs of deterioration? If the house has a forced air system, can the filters be changed easily? Does it have a safety control to regulate temperature and an automatic switch to prevent gas or oil from entering if the pilot light is out?

If there is a hot water system, is it noisy when water in the pipes contracts or expands? Are there valves to control heat distribution? Does the boiler have a safety valve that turns the system off if pressure builds up or if the water level is low? Attic: Is the attic well insulated? (R30 is recommended.) Is the insulation dry without signs of a leaky roof, inadequate vapor barrier or insufficient ventilation? Is there easy access to the attic?

If the house has basic defects that will be costly to repair, make sure the purchase offer reflects the problems, Ms. Graham said. Either specify the defects and ask the present owner to make the repairs, or try to renegotiate the purchase price.

Remember, once you have bought the house it's yours to repair regardless of cost.

ASTRONAUT ADDRESS—The public is invited to hear Dr. Linda Godwin, a NASA astronaut candidate, speak June 18 to employees at the National Space Technology Laboratories. The one-hour program will begin at 11 a.m. and Dr. Godwin will answer questions from the audience following her address. The program is sponsored by the NASA Federal Women's Program, managed by Dr. Marie Kiely. Dr. Godwin was selected as an astronaut candidate in June 1985 and visited NSTL last October as part of her training and evaluation program. She joined the space agency in 1980 at the Johnson Space Center in the Payload Operations Division of the Mission Operations Directorate where she worked as a flight controller and payloads officer on several Space Shuttle missions.

ETV Brief

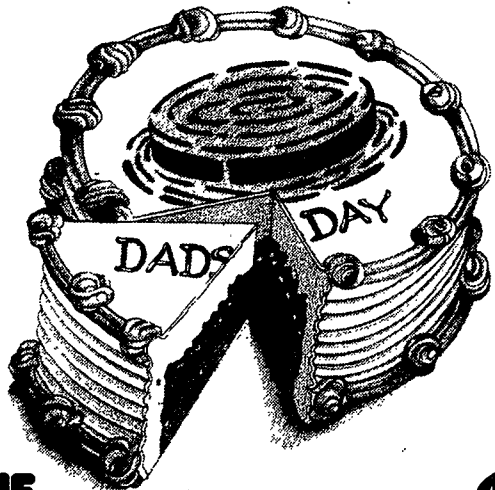

MILITARY SECRETS

"Great Performances" rebroadcasts "Man from Moscow" at 9 p.m., Fridays on Mississippi ETV.

This true espionage drama is based on the memoirs of Greville Wynne, a British businessman and high-placed British Intelligence courier. The story, which takes place during the height of the Cold War, traces the relationship between Wynne (David Calder) and Onel Oleg Penkovsky (Christopher Rozycki), a high-ranking Soviet Intelligence officer who passed valuable military secrets to the West.

This tale of East/West relations dramatizes the personal stories behind the events leading up to two major international crises: the building of the Berlin Wall in 1961 and the 1962 Cuban missile crisis.
